THE BUDGET.

PERPLEXING SITUATION.

[Reuter's Service To "The Telegraph"]

London, Received June 23.
In the House of Commons a perplexing situation has arisen over the Finance Bill.

Many contended that the Local Taxation clauses were outside the limits of a Money Bill and demanded that the clauses be dropped or the Bill withdrawn.

The Speaker suggested that the proper course would be to pass supplementary resolutions validating the clauses.

Mr. Samuel estimated that the Government, to meet the views of dissentients, would, after the second reading, invite the House to take the Bill in two parts—firstly, net taxation; secondly, the proposals regarding local grants. Then the House would have to deal with two Finance Bills and a Revenue Bill. It would be impossible to pay the local grants this year, and consequently the increase in income tax would only be one penny. This, however, was a reprieve, not an acquittal.

Mr. Holt, on behalf of the dissentients, said he was entirely satisfied.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE EXPLAINS.

On Mr. Walter Long asking for a clearer statement, Mr. Lloyd George explained that a penny would be taken off the proposed increase in unearned income tax from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4d. The increase would thus be only a penny. This would make a difference of £2,570,000, while the non-payment of the proposed grants would save £2,182,000. He budgeted for a surplus of £350,000. There would thus be a net deficiency of £144,000, but he anticipated the excess in Customs revenue over anticipations would cover this.

In his Budget speech last month, Mr. Lloyd George said the Income Tax would remain unchanged on earned incomes up to £1,000, while between £1,000 and £3,000 it would range from 10s. 2d. to 1s. 4d. On unearned incomes the tax would be raised to 1s. 4d. and a super-tax would be operative from £3,000 upwards upon a graduated scale, rising to 1s. 4d. Thus some incomes would pay 2s. 8d.

LIFE OF A CONSUL

Amusing Picture of Its Vicissitudes.

A member of our Consular Service drawn an amusing picture of its "vicissitudes" in the London Morning Post.

"One of the principal duties of a Consul is to render assistance to the subjects of the country which he represents, and it follows that his routine duties are diversified by many queer episodes, puzzling situations, and fitness for his calling is tested by several ordeals in the examination room, but the most accomplished of officials is not prepared to cope with every situation with which he may be confronted in the course of his professional career.

"Husband gone again," ran the pencilled appeal on the visiting card of an ill-used wife. "Please arrange. Act at once; he is extremely artful."

"A telegraphic appeal to stop a prodigal son from running away to sea was thus worded by distraught and semi-literate parents: 'Please prevent our Joe living by sheep (leaving by ship). No allusion to a surfeit of mutton diet was intended.

"The table of fraud includes redeeming exceptions. The Three From Froms (whose appearance was all against them)

Reuter's correspondent at Ottawa states that the Dominion Government has received a telegram from Mr. Stevens, member for Vancouver, intimating that the situation in connection with the Hindus aboard the Komagata Maru is so serious that it may necessitate the calling out of the Militia.

Sir R. L. Borden, the Premier, is giving the matter his personal attention.

OBITUARY.

MR. MORGAN WILLIAMS.

London, Received June 22.

The death is announced of Mr.

Morgan Williams, D.L., M.C.E., Chairman of the Rhonda and Swansea Bay Railway.

[The deceased, who was for 20 years Vice-Chairman of the Metropolitan Bank of England and Wales was born in 1825. He was in his early days associated with home railways as a civil engineer and also with railway work in Italy. He constructed many hundreds of miles of railways in Russia, being chief resident engineer under the late Sir John Hawkshaw, as consulting engineer. During this period he received several marks of favour from Czar Alexander II; was for some time general manager of the Danubius and Witepsk Railway, and subsequently a director until it was purchased by the Russian Government. Since his retirement from the engineering profession he has taken an active part in the public life of South Wales. His first wife was Constance, Baroness von Wolf, daughter of General Carl von Manderstjerna, Military Governor of St. Petersburg.]

repaid every penny of their passage money from Athens to San Frivolo and a most touching letter of thanks, beginning 'Honourable Gentleman, and concluded by 'will ever pray,' etc., was the sequel to temporary relief afforded to a son of the old Maltese nobility, who was ill-advised enough to attempt suicide by rat poison during an embarrassing hiatus in his professional engagement as a coal trimmer.

Trouble with Sailors.

"The shipping industry provides a whole sea of troubles for the Vice Consul in a maritime centre. Skippers are notoriously rough-and-ready in their methods and have a disconcerting habit of dumping undesirable members of their ship's company on the nearest available Consul. Stowaways, plague patients, madmen, murderers, mutineers, all are handed over to the Consul to deal with—generally in the small hours of a winter's morning or during the Sunday afternoon siesta. A world of marine humanity peopled the Consular Shipping Office. At a long office table, with little battered hand bags containing their ship's 'papers' at their elbows, sit the skippers, puffing at the choice cigars of the Indies as they pore with the shipping clerks over official blue forms. barriade in the form of a counter, a seething and unsavoury mob of Lascars, firemen, trimmers, greasers, and other horny and uncouth sons of the sea, of every colour and nationality, clamoured to be 'signed on' or 'signed off,' or to go to hospital or the boarding-house, or the Devil, as the case may be.

"By no means is the Consul's life a bed of roses. Even the amenities of residence in fashionable tourist resorts such as Nice or Cairo are impaired by the vexatious demands of the holiday traveller. It is a sad fact that many worthy citizens, who should know much better, regard their country's representative abroad as little better than an agent paid to attend to their petty passing needs. It is useless for the Consul to explain the difference between his line of business and that of Thomas Cook and Son.

"Old ladies insist on his indicating the emporium most appropriate for the purchase of hairpins, fussy Anglo-Indian colonels enlist his services in the recovery of lost articles of luggage, and vulgar persons of every age and sex pester him with frivolous inquiries quite outside his province, and have even been known to approach him for the purchase of postage stamps.

"Luckily, however, for the Consul, his duties are not solely connected with the relief of distress."

THE FASCINATION OF GOLF.

What is Its Secret?

Though the American invaders have not won our Amateur Championship, says the Times, they have shown themselves to be splendid golfers, and not least by the spirit of good sportsmanship with which they have accepted defeat. It is sportsmanship such as theirs that justifies the ascendancy of golf. Special trains, cohorts of correspondents, thousands of insatiable spectators, and sympathizers, all testify to the popularity of a game that less than 30 years ago was the esoteric sport of the Scots and has since then conquered the civilized world. If ever in some austere future an anti-golf crusade were to be organized and were to carry its point, stranded townlets now bursting with the prosperity it has brought them would sink back into stagnation, properties transformed by the ubiquitous pastime into miniature gold mines would lapse into their pristine prairie value, and multitudes of men and women would miss one of their main interests in life and be utterly at a loss how to turn their leisure hours to account. Golf is more than a game; it is a social question—and one that threatens to become more formidable with every year that passes. No sport has yet been invented that so insidiously into the day's routine or makes attention to business and affairs seem so much to resemble a cheerful form of asceticism. By pleasing gradations the Saturday half-holiday of the beginner expands into a round and then a couple of rounds on Sunday; an afternoon is soon filched from the middle of the week; there follows the discovery that by leaving the office a little earlier in the summer months a game in the evening is always possible; and as the spell is woven more closely and the conscience hardens, a full day off or a whole week-end becomes first contrivable, then natural, and finally a thing to be resented if it has to be forgone. Such is the facile descent now being trod by thousands who twenty years ago really worked and felt bound to apologize when caught in their chance hours of relaxation; and there are thousands more who think play, and worst of all, talk golf from week to week and year to year.

AN IMPRESSIVE PARADE.

What is the secret of its fascination? Probably at bottom that it looks so easy and is so hard. Nothing can well seem simpler than hitting a stationary ball with a club. But in actual fact the human body proves to be curiously ill-adapted for any such task. Nature does not point the way; proficiency in other games is no passport. There are subtleties of how to stand, how to

WILL THE REBELS SURRENDER?

London, Received June 22.

Reuter's correspondent at Durazzo states that at the request of the insurgent leaders, the Prince has agreed to a two days' armistice. It is stated that the rebels are inclined to surrender. It is understood that the Dutch officers of the Gendarmerie disapprove of the Prince's action.

London, Received June 23.

Reuter's correspondent at Durazzo states that the Government troops have been fighting the rebels at Karabunar and Luchina since Saturday. The rebels drove them to-day to the River Semeni, and Major Kiron has ordered a steamer to bring them to Durazzo.

swing back, how to secure the proper cooperation of body, arms, and eye, that have all to be mastered before it can be satisfactorily accomplished. The problem of dispatching that insolent ball in the desired direction becomes suddenly terrifying. Men wrestle with it as with a refractory collar. The most even temper is inflamed by its perversities. Prodigies of resolution and will-power in other spheres cannot remember on the golf-link to keep their head down and their eye on the ball. Weak little men with hardly an effort send it flying a sixth of a mile. Huge burly fellows, with a blow that would shake St. Paul's, hit it 30 yards. It is the most baffling, tantalizing, vexatious of games. Even when the novice is passed, there are days of infinite tribulation when nothing will go right, abysmal lapses of form and loss of instinct such as never afflict one in any other sport.

But if the sorrows of golf are great, so also are its rewards. There is a feel and a glow about a clean-hit drive, or an approach that dribbles up to the hole, that very few strokes at polo, cricket, lawn tennis, or billiards are able to evoke. In the course of a two hours' round a player has every variety of chance to cover himself with glory or disgrace. It depends altogether on his own skill and nerve and self-control. One suffers for one's own shortcomings; one profits by one's own prowess—with just enough of luck and chance thrown in to remind one of the mutability of life. And to many people this sense of standing on one's own merits or defects, and of being solely responsible for victory or defeat, is part of the attraction of golf. It comforts the diffident, it inspires the self-reliant; and the essential companionableness of the game saves it from egotism. Even on the black days of remorseless incapacity there are consolations in being out in the open air, in the scenery and surroundings, in the absolute escape from mundane worries, in the jolly sporting spirit that blows over the links, and in the consciousness that by to-morrow one's good shots will be remembered, one's bad ones forgotten, and hope again in the ascendant. Judgment and concentration and the courage never to submit or yield, and evenness of temper, these are all tested and disciplined by golf; while as a physical exercise it has the supreme virtue of being equally good for the young, the middle-aged, and the old of both sexes. A veteran of fifty-five with a touch of lumbago defeats a champion of twenty-seven; a boy of twenty disposes of famous and seasoned masters of the game who have been playing it longer than he has been alive. People may point at the golfer as a but too typical product of our soft and leisured age; but golf itself, so long as it remains a game and does not grow into a disease, needs no excuse.

SNATCHING.

The Chinese who appeared on Saturday before Mr. C. D. Melbourne on a charge of bag-snatching was before the court again this morning on remand.

Dr. Sun's Letter.

Summarised the ideas contained in Dr. Sun's latest vision amount to this, that Japan should oppose the cause of the Mingand it in overthrowing the rule of Yuan Shih-kai, and obtain in-return a position similar to Great Britain's in India, but differing from it in the fact that, whereas Great Britain retained India by might, Japan would be lord of China by virtue of the country's gratitude. In other words Dr. Sun, the one time patriot, would become a traitor, and because of bitter reverses sustained to his own ambitions, would sell his country. There is absolutely nothing in history to correspond with such a bargain.
Not the least astounding feature of the letter is the extraordinary willingness of the writer to disregard existing agreements with other Powers. Their interests would count for nothing at all in the sealing of the compact and, of course, they would naturally be willing to sit idly by and look on while the proposed changes took place. Unfortunately for Dr. Sun, and his dreams the world no longer takes them seriously.
Things have changed very much in China since he left it, and changed for the better.

Daily Press.

The West River Flood.
Floods are not rare occurrences in this region, or in many other parts of China, but not for a century, it is said, has a flood of such dimensions occurred in the regions of the West River and its tributaries. Consequently the damage done is proportionately great, and relief measures which this will necessitate will be a sore-tax upon the Provincial Treasury, which is not yet in a position to bear these sudden demands, much less to stand the expense of the costly measures which are manifestly needed to safeguard the towns along the river bank from such inundations. The day is yet far off when China will abandon the fatalistic attitude her statesmen assume towards calamities of this nature, which are largely preventable, and when she will call to her aid the best expert help the world can provide to mitigate these evils. It is of interest to mention, however, that a first step is about to be taken.
Lieutenant Colonel William Sibert, of the United States Army, an engineer who has made a name for himself by his work on the Panama Canal, is at the present moment crossing the Pacific to China to make a preliminary investigation of the flood-areas of the Hwai River, which rises in the South of Honan and flows easterly across the Province of Chinese Native Papers

There is, in fact, little interest in publishing the many editorials that emanate from the President's office in Peking; for most people know that these can only concern a few of the teeming millions, and even those which deal with the population generally may hardly ever touch those whom they are supposed to concern. On the other hand, these robberies and murders are matters of personal concern to the readers of the papers, for one can never know but some relative of his may be involved, and indeed, one cannot be certain that the blow will not fall upon one's own head the next time one goes into the country.

Perhaps Professor Parker does not specifically refer to these matters when he uses the "Weary waste of words" phrase, but as most of the vernacular newspapers have been filled with little else of late, we must believe that they are included in the indictment.
Such must indeed appear to be a "Weary waste of words" to those not interested, but to those interested—and they are doubtless the vast majority of the readers—they are of course of the first importance.

GENERAL NEWS.

Khedive's Remarkable Tour.
The Khedive's tour through the Delta, which he has completed, has shown in a remarkable manner the wealth of the land-owners in the provinces, says a Central News telegram from Cairo. In many places private individuals decorated the roads over which the Khedive motored for distances of several miles. Coffee was served in cups worth £500; the chair in which the Khedive sat during brief visits to country houses had in many cases cost from £100 to £200, and one pusher who entertained the Khedive for half an hour is alleged to have spent £10,000 on the preparations, while another borrowed cannon from the Egyptian Army and fired a salute as his Highness arrived.

Opening of Publichouses at 10 a.m.
The class of English tourist who complains with heat of the early closing of Scottish publichouses at 10 p.m. and total closing on Sunday has now fresh occasion for contemptuous comment. Scottish publichouses now cannot open for the sale of exciseable liquors before 10 a.m. The change will directly affect clubs, but the mischief which it is intended to strike at is localized in the industrial districts near Glasgow. This is breakfast-hour drinking of intoxicants on an empty stomach, to which many workers are addicted. The new restriction applies to licensed grocers, but they are permitted to open earlier for the sale of commodities other than exciseable liquors.

How They Apologised.
This is how the editor of the International apologised in his last number:—"Our printer's devil evidently confused the names of Professor Brander Matthews, of Columbia University, and Matthew, the well-known Christologist. We apologise to both. St. Matthew was no professor. Professor Matthews is no saint."

Lord Haldane Bans Lord Halsbury.
An odd little incident occurred at the sitting of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, says the Chronicle. Sir Robert Finlay, who was arguing a Canadian case, referred their lordships to Lord Halsbury's Encyclopedia of the Laws of England. The reference drew from Lord Haldane, the Lord Chancellor, who presided, these remarks: "So far as I am concerned—I have already expressed the opinion, and I express it once again—this work is edited by a very eminent lawyer, and several eminent lawyers have written it, but I protest against its being cited as an authority, and I may say that it is not to be cited here again."

Banned Statuettes.
In consequence of complaints of certain exhibits at the "Laughter Show" at Holland Park, a Scotland Yard officer and a uniformed police inspector paid a visit to the exhibition. After a tour of inspection they ordered the removal of four nude statuettes of women executed in tinted wax by a French sculptor, and a panel which represented a woman in a bathing pool. The promoters of the exhibition contend that the banned exhibits were interesting from an artistic standpoint.

Locusts in the F. M. S.
The locusts are with us again in greater swarms than ever, and unless the Straits Government can be made to see eye to eye with the rest of the world they will be with us to eternity, writes a Tampin correspondent of the Malay Mail. It is useless for the F. M. S. Government to go on at this rate, as most of the breeding places are in Malacca territory, and no sooner do the F. M. S. people get rid of one swarm than they are invaded by another from Malacca. The Malays in this part of the country are exceedingly poor, indeed poorer than Malays in any other part of the States, and it does not lighten their sorrows to find after weeks and weeks of hard work in the burning sun their padi ruined in a few hours by swarms of locusts. In fact not a single blade of padi is to be seen in several kampongs and nothing short of a Government distress fund will meet the situation.

NERVOUS DISORDERS THROUGH HEAT.

During the prevailing hot weather, the whole nervous system is depressed and all the body's functions work with diminished force. This is why people feel unable to do as much as usual, and get fatigued so easily. Since all actions of the body, mental and physical, depend on the nervous system, it is obvious that it must be restored to its normal efficiency and kept there if the individual is to enjoy his usual health and capacity for work.

For this purpose a reconstituent food is essential. What the best reconstituent is is distinctly stated by a physician who writes in the Indian Medical Gazette:—"For residents in tropical climates, suffering from general debility, the best and most readily assimilated food is a combination of casein with glycerophosphates. This cannot be prescribed as an ordinary mixture, pill or powder, but for some years past I have used the preparation known as Sanatogen which is composed of pure casein and glycerophosphate of sodium. I have every reason to be satisfied with the results obtained."

The Views of Eighteen Thousand Doctors.
This is only one of more than eighteen thousand written statements by physicians. Many of them have extolled the value of Sanatogen in the leading medical journals of the world. Numbers of famous men and women who have derived great benefit from Sanatogen have echoed their statements.

Sir Gilbert Parker, the distinguished M. P. and Novelist writes:—"I have used Sanatogen with extraordinary benefit. It is to my mind a true food tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigour to the overworked body and mind. It has rendered splendid service to my health and physical well-being."

While this must convince all English residents in China who know Sir Gilbert Parker's great reputation, the following statements by two of His Majesty's Judges who live in India, where the climatic conditions are more onerous than here, must carry perfect conviction.

Statements of His Majesty's Judges.
The Hon. Mr. Justice Robertson, Judge of the Chief Court, Lahore, writes:—"My experience with Sanatogen has been very favourable. I took it for some weeks during the most trying season of the year, June, July, and August—in Lahore, in the Panjab Plains—and found it a great strengthener."

Even stronger is the Hon. Mr. Justice Kenington's experience regarding Sanatogen's tonic and revivifying powers and its digestive value. The Hon. Mr. Kenington writes:—"I have much pleasure in stating that I have tried Sanatogen in the great heat of Lahore, where it is DANGEROUS DECKLOADS.

An enquiry has been held into the case of the British steamer County of Devon, which was abandoned in the North Atlantic in February while carrying a deckload of timber. Judgment was delivered on May 23rd. The Court found that the primary cause of the loss of the vessel was her excessive deckload—excessive in weight and excessive in bulk—but it did not advocate new legislation, for a simple reason. If the Court maintained moderate deck cargoes had caused the loss of life and property of which the nautical assessors were satisfied, a vessel with an excessive deckload was an unworthy vessel, and if the existing laws prohibiting the sending of unseaworthy vessels to sea were not enforced it was vain to seek protection by new legislation. The County of Devon, like other British steamers which have been lost while carrying deckloads, was bound from the United States to a Continental port, for vessels are not allowed to trade with British ports in the winter carrying deckloads, and it is to the United States especially that British underwriters look for severe discouragement of the practice of loading timber cargoes on deck in winter. If foreign ships are allowed to carry deck cargoes there will be British owners who will be ready to compete for the trade, but if all vessels are tarried with the same brush there would be no question of the exigencies of competition.

especially trying, and am absolutely satisfied with it.

"Mr. Kenington has also taken it, and we have both found it a wonderful reviver and tonic. It is also the best cure for digestive troubles that I have come across, and I do not know how I should have stood the heat without it."

Sanatogen overcomes nervous and physical lassitude, depleted energy and the other mental and physical conditions due to the season, and gives a sensation of well-being and vitality which is as refreshing as it is stimulating.

If you wish to know more about Sanatogen, write, mentioning this paper, to A. Wulfsberg and Co., 6, Kinkiang Road, Shanghai, who will be pleased to forward you a valuable booklet entitled "The Art of Living," gratis and post free.

Sanatogen can be obtained of all Chemists, in bottles of two sizes.

PHTHISIS IN THE COLONY.

The medical and sanitary reports for last year give some interesting facts and figures regarding phthisis. There were 914 deaths from pulmonary tuberculosis and phthisis, of which 885 were Chinese. The total number of deaths shows a considerable increase over the figure for 1912 when there were 783 deaths. The deaths amongst the Chinese from this cause were 10.8 of the total deaths amongst the community as against 8.1 in 1912. This mortality from phthisis is very heavy and it is clear that some effort is wanted to reduce it. The report remarks that considerable efforts are being made to put a stop to the inveterate habit of the lower class Chinese of spitting in public buildings and offices and on staircases, footpaths, wharves and the like. "Notices have been posted in many public buildings, as well as in tramcars, ferry boats and other public vehicles, while lectures have been given and leaflets distributed, calling attention to the dangers incident to the habit."

It is doubtful whether efforts of this kind will result in any noticeable diminution of the spitting habit, but probably it has done some little good and is therefore not by any means to be condemned. What is wanted, however, is fresh air and more sanitary dwellings. "The fact that the soil in the lower levels (which are the most densely populated) is water-logged during the greater part of the year has no doubt much to do with the heavy mortality from this disease, but it is to be hoped that the influence of education will gradually effect a further reduction in our phthisis mortality." That this hope will be realised in time admits of little doubt, but the routing out of the more insanitary dwellings in the Colony and the admission of more fresh air into the houses would work wonders much more rapidly.

If we turn to the report by Dr. McKenny on the Tung Wa Hospital we find this very point viewed from another angle. His remarks may be quoted in part:

A point which I would like to emphasise, and which I think these figures help to prove, is that advanced phthisis under present conditions is practically incurable, and that medicinal remedies are of little value when unaccompanied by suitable hygienic surroundings. A superficial comparison between the methods employed in this hospital on the Western and Chinese sides may be of interest.

Treatment.	European.	Chinese.
Rest.	given.	given.
Better food.	"	"
More air space.	"	"
Cough sedatives.	Opium or derivatives.	Opium.
Pulmonary antiseptics.	given.	not given.
Free air space and sunshine.	not given.	"

That is to say that the hospital is handicapped severely because, while its treatment may ameliorate the ravages of the disease in many cases, the treatment which is nowadays counted most essential of all cannot be given. Nothing is more firmly established to-day than that the open-air treatment is imperative in phthisis cases—that whether the weather be mild or fairly rigorous, the patient must practically live all the time in the open air—and that treatment is not possible here. In that case, there should be only one course to pursue. The Government should be urged to turn its attention without delay to the building of a sanatorium either on the island of Victoria or on one of the outlying islands. There is no excuse for denying sufferers from phthisis a chance of a cure where that chance exists and is reasonably strong.

Gael Improvements.

The Telegraph has so often remarked, in uncomplimentary terms, on certain masters within Victoria Gael, that it is only fair that a word should be said on the other side where possible. The medical officer's annual report has some remarks regarding sanitary buckets concerning which we have, from time to time, made complaint. Special precautions, he states have been taken with regard to these buckets. "Lids are kept on the open ramp, thus preventing flies from gaining easy access and disseminating the virus. Seventy-eight buckets have been so made that they are always retained in the same cell, so as to prevent an interchange of buckets. Should the system prove satisfactory, it is hoped that in time all prisoners sentenced to six months or more may be supplied with a separate bucket." This is a little better than the tale that was formerly told, though there is nothing in all this to crow over. It is an improvement—that is all.

Not all Right Yet.

These precautions, it may be remarked, have been taken with reference to typhoid fever. An increase in the number of cases occurred during last year, and certain precautions had to be taken to obviate danger as far as possible. We wonder whether sand-boxes are provided in certain cells? Some time ago we had information to the effect that there were cells where sand for the bucket was urgently wanted to give prisoners who were spending all the time in their cells half a chance. The report, again, states that "all prisoners connected with the cook house are examined in order to make sure that there are no 'Carriers' employed in this work." Nothing is said about the tins in which the food is served; yet we have a vivid recollection of a complaint to the effect that some of them were in very bad condition and that they should have been scrapped before. Are the food tins and drinking tins all right now? No one wants to see the gael made so comfortable that the inmates will sign to get back to it; but, unless we are greatly misinformed and a sudden series of improvements has been effected, there are still matters which require attention. The health—the life even—of a prisoner is in the care of the authorities while he is in prison and they are bound to protect it as far as possible. That a man is a lawbreaker is no reason why his life should unnecessarily be endangered.

And Statue Square.

While on this subject, occasion may be taken to refer to the trees which have been planted in Statue Square to compensate for the uprooting of those which formerly adorned the centre of the roadway. When this matter was brought up in the Legislative Council some time back, it was stated that flowering trees would be planted along the side of the roadway. The official interpretation of "the side of the roadway" is now found to mean along the edge of the footpath. The new trees have been placed right on the pavement, just inside the kerbstone. As they grow they will thus become a far greater source of obstruction than were the trees in the centre of the road. Surely they could have been planted, as was promised, along the side of the road.

The Children's Plot.

Several times have we commented on the matter of the trees which have been planted in the children's plot at Kowloon, and pointed out that many a day must elapse ere they can become of any use for the purpose for which they were provided—the giving of shelter. Our argument has received very full endorsement in the report of the Superintendent of the Botanical and Forestry Department for last year, which says "it will be several years before they are of any use for shade purposes, even if they survive typhoons." That is a cheering prospect, to be sure. When the ground was laid out it was stated that the trees would be "fast-growing shade trees." That it now appears, is exactly what they are not. By the time they are of any value for shade purposes, the children who now use the plot will be grown men and women, we fear.

HELD FOR RANSOM.

Nightsoil Coolies in the Hands of Pirates.

This morning we were informed of an incident, or rather a series of incidents, which, if it were not for the fact that there is a serious side to the question, would be quite amusing.

One day last week, while one of the nightsoil boats was making the journey from Hongkong to Canton it was held up by a gang of men who may be described as pirates, and the crew, about ten in number, were, and are, held up for ransom.

Towards the end of last week, immediately the news of the occurrence reached Hongkong, Mr. Trautman, the Head of the Sanitary Board was commissioned to go to Canton at once, to investigate the matter.

With him, we are informed, is Sham U, who has control of the nightsoil traffic, and the matter is receiving attention. But this, according to information, is by no means the first occurrence of this kind; as, during the past few weeks, several of the nightsoil boats have been similarly held up and the men released only when money was paid over to the pirates.

The trouble is experienced at a place called Wong Lin and behind the pots there is a motive of which we are ignorant, but which at the moment we are in honour bound not to reveal.

The state of affairs is serious, and the sooner something is done to stop the holding up of the boats and to put right other matters the better.

COMPANY MEETING.

Hongkong Ice Company Limited.

[VERBATIM.]

An extraordinary general meeting of the Hongkong Ice Company Limited was held at the offices of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Company, Limited, this morning. Hon. Mr. D. Landale presided and those present were: Messrs. G. K. Haxton (manager), B. D. F. Beith (secretary), A. Rodger, Chon Po-sien, Ho Fook, Lo Cheung-shui, J. Arnold, H. S. Hills, C. O. F. Cunningham, R. E. Macdonald, A. Murdoch, J. C. Taylor and H. W. Looker.

The Chairman said: As it is now past the time for which this meeting has been called, and there is a quorum present, I will ask the secretary to read the notice convening the meeting.

The Secretary read the notice convening the meeting.

The Chairman:—Gentlemen, this meeting has been called to formally confirm resolutions which have already been passed. I therefore propose the first resolution:—

That it is expedient to acquire and purchase the business property and good will of the Oriental Ice Syndicate and that the Provisional Agreements for the purpose submitted to this Meeting dated the 25th March, 1914, and made between The Procurer General in Hongkong of the Society of the Missions

Etrangeres of the one part and this Company of the other part and dated the 25th day of March, 1914, and made between the Honourable Sir Otchobek Paul Chater, Knight, C.M.G., Joseph Whittlesby Noble, Antonio Barretto and Arratoon Vertannes Apar of the one part and the Company of the other part be and the same are hereby approved and ratified and that the General Managers of the Company be and they hereby are authorised and requested to carry the same into effect with full power to assent to any modification in the said Agreement which they think expedient in the interests of the Company.

Mr. Arnold: I beg to second that.

The Chairman: I beg now to put the resolution as read, proposed by myself and seconded by Mr. Arnold. Those in favour kindly put up their hands. Against. Carried unanimously.

The Chairman: I beg now to propose the second resolution:—That the Capital of the Company be increased from $125,000 (divided into 5,000 shares of $25 each) to $62,500 (divided into 6,500 shares of $25 each) by the creation of 1,500 new shares of $25 each.

Mr. Rodger: I beg to second that.

The Chairman:—The resolution which you have just heard read has been proposed by myself and seconded by Mr. Rodger. Those in favour kindly hold up their hands. Against. Carried unanimously.

The Chairman: I now propose the third resolution:—

That the said 1,500 new shares be pursuant to the first mentioned Agreement in Resolution 1 allotted to shares fully paid up to the said Procurer General in Hongkong of the Society of the Missions Etrangeres in consideration of the transfer to the Company of the property business and goodwill referred to in the said Agreement and upon the footing as to dividend provided for in the said Agreement.

Mr. Cunningham: I beg to second that.

The Chairman:—The resolution which you have just heard read has been proposed by myself and seconded by Mr. Cunningham. Those in favour kindly hold up their hands. Against. Carried unanimously.

The Chairman:—I now beg to propose the fourth resolution:—

That the new Articles already approved by this Meeting and for the purpose of identification subscribed by the Chairman thereof, be and the same are hereby approved

WEST RIVER FLOODS.

SAMPANS PLYING IN THE STREETS.

Terrible Devastation and Loss of Life.

Reports from the West River districts tell of great devastation caused by floods, which are the worst known for at least 20 years. Most damage has been done in the upper reaches of the river, where whole villages have practically been wiped out and the rice crops completely destroyed. Great distress among the inhabitants is felt as a consequence. In some places the waters rose as much as seventy feet in two days, and the loss of life is said to be enormous.

In Wuchow and district the happenings are terrible. The water, overflowing the banks of the river, gradually flooded the native quarters until the people were driven to the top floors. Even there they were not safe: for in many cases the whole of the houses became submerged, roofs were carried away, and the people escaped as best they knew how. In some quarters dykes previously existed to keep the waters out of the paddy fields, but these have all been carried away by the floods. It is said that in one instance, before the waters had completely submerged the fields, villagers busily engaged in patching up the barriers fired at a paddle steamer going up river, as they considered that the wash from the boat would carry away the dyke. No one was injured, however, and the steamer continued on her course.

The effects of the floods are being felt even as far down as Kongmoon, and steamers coming in from that port this morning report that the water is higher than most inhabitants can remember. "The whole country," said one of the skippers, "is a picture of awful devastation. Where previously we saw fields we see an ocean of water. All the rice crops have been destroyed, and the people are in terrible straits. In some parts of Kongmoon the native houses were already flooded when we left. Sampans were even plying in the streets."

We are given to understand that the Customs House is in danger. In front of the building, and over a long stretch on either side, there is a wall built for the purpose of keeping the floods out. Last evening the water had risen so high that it was above the level of the street on which the Customs House stands, and it was evident that if there was a further rise of three or four inches, or if the wall gave way, the Customs building would be instantly flooded.

At the wharf at Kongmoon, too, the water was only a few inches below the landing stage, and it was feared that if there were further rains, it would become completely submerged.

and that such regulations be and they are hereby adopted as the Articles of the Company to the exclusion of and in substitution for all the existing Articles thereof.

Mr. Ho Fook: I beg to second that.

The Chairman: The resolution which you have just heard read, has been proposed by myself and seconded by Mr. Ho Fook. Those in favour kindly hold up their hands. Against. Carried unanimously. That is all the business, gentlemen, thank you for your attendance.

The World Postage.

The British postal authorities, as well as a majority of the world's Governments, have resolved in favour of a reduction of the foreign postage rate from twopence-halfpenny to three-halfpence, according to the Standard. If this is so, Sir Henniker Heaton is probably right in believing that the general penny rate cannot be long deferred. Within sight of such a consummation, it is only the official mind that could make even a temporary stand upon the last halfpenny.

LANDSLIDES.

Roads Likely to be Stopped for Motor Traffic.

In consequence of the heavy rains of the past few days there have been many landslides in the Colony, and the Jubilee and Pokfulam Roads are likely to be stopped for motor traffic for the next few days.

The Police have intimated to the P. W. D. a landslide at the junction of Robinson Road and Glenealy which is causing an obstruction to the public thoroughfare; a landslide at the junction of Findlay Road, the Peak, obstructing the side channel; Jubilee Road and Pokfulam Road cut up in several places and several holes existing which are dangerous to traffic, and several landslips along the same roads blocking the roadway and the side channel; at Aberdeen damage to the road near the main gate of the Aberdeen dock, a hole in the street opposite No. 49, Aberdeen, a landslide near the boat shop No. 3, Aberdeen, and a landslide at the junction of Nathan Road and Jordan Road, Yau-mat, which is dangerous to traffic.

THE GREAT DUNCAN.

A Fine Show at the Victoria Theatre.

Congratulations to the Great Duncan for the fine evening's entertainment which he presented to a good house at the Victoria Theatre last night. Seldom has Hongkong been treated to so clever and so convincing a display of hypnotism and magic, and those who watched his extraordinary tricks will assuredly want to pay a second visit to the theatre while he is performing there.

The programme opened with a variety of conjuring tricks at which Mr. Duncan proved himself to be strikingly expert; and these were followed by some exceedingly wonderful vanishing acts. In one of these, Miss Maxine Hewitt, having been tied securely in a bag by two members of the audience, was placed in a trunk which was then locked and stoutly corded. Anyone who knows how she got out might step round to this office and tell us for we want to know rather badly. We would like, too, to discover how a charming little girl was made to disappear from the table on which she was laid, and turn up suddenly among the audience. Mr. Duncan will probably tell us of these things at the same time as he takes us into his confidence as to his own escape from a packing case in which a soldier and a sailor nailed him up, after having first strapped him securely in a strait-waistcoat.

As a hypnotist he succeeded in making his medium, Miss Hewitt, do practically whatever he or the audience wished, one of his most striking achievements being to throw her into a state of catalepsy during which she maintained complete rigidity while three men stood on her body, which lay, bridge-fashion, over two chairs. The success of the evening, however, was the final item; a "Hypnotic Spanish Dance"; people who are curious as to this will do well to go and see it to-night.

The other artists who contributed to the programme formed pleasing foils to the Great Duncan. Miss Fanny Halle's balancing act was quite a triumph and claimed long rounds of applause, as did also the remarkable singing and playing and clever fooling of Mr. Joe Reed, who received two recalls. Messrs. Monte Deane and Leonard Barton also gave fine comedy turns, Mr. Deane especially doing some very useful work.

"Frivolity" Freed.

Mr. "Frivolity" Freese is to leave for Canton to-morrow where he is giving a repeat performance on Wednesday.

BOY BITTEN.

"The Dog it was that Died."

DOG ABROAD WITHOUT A MUZZLE.

A Small Fine Imposed.

This morning in the Police Court before Mr. J.R. Wood, Mr. Ally of No. 5, Wild Dell, Wanchai, was charged with allowing his dog to go abroad without a muzzle.

Mr. D.V. Stevenson, of Messrs Deacon, Looker, Deacon and Harston, defended.

A small Chinese boy gave evidence that he was riding on the merry-go-round at Happy Valley on May 31, when a dog rushed up to him and bit him. The dog had no muzzle on.

Sergeant Ogg informed his Worship that a man in attendance on the merry-go-round killed the dog and took it to Dr. Kew.

A Lapse of Time.
Dr. Kew, who had been called, was not then in court and Mr. Stevenson said that his client wanted to be satisfied that the dog was his dog and that it had no muzzle on. He remarked that the offence was committed on May 31 and the summons was not taken out until June 18. There was more behind it than met the eye.

Dr. Kew, who by this time had arrived in court, said that on Monday June 1 he saw a dog which had been brought to him by a boy at about 7 a.m. The dog was dead, and round its neck was a collar bearing the license number 14-1,122. Witness knew the dog and, he believed, also its father and mother. He was also aware that the dog belonged to the defendant. The dog had no muzzle on when he saw it.

Knew the Dog.
Mr. Stevenson:—You knew the dog?—Yes.

Did you notify the defendant, when the dog was brought to your house, that it was his dog and that it was dead?—I told his clerk the same afternoon, or some one associated with him, by the name of Xavier.

Did you take the collar of the dog?—No, I did not.

What did you do with the dog?—Sent it to the Police Station.

Which Police Station?—No. 2. What time did it reach the Police Station?—I cannot say.

What time did you send it off?—A little after 7.

Was the collar on the dog when you sent it?—Yes.

And the license number?—Yes. Sergeant Pitt stationed at No. 2 Police Station said that on June 1 at 8.30 a.m. he was called to the charge room where a dog had been brought in in a sack. He recognised the dog, which was a wire haired terrier, as belonging to the defendant. There was no collar on the dog when he saw it.

Mr. Stevenson:—A report was made to the station at 10 o'clock on the 31st. Did that report reach you?—No.

Did you ever receive a report from Mr. Ally on June 1?—No. Whose Dog.

Will you swear that?—Yes. I never received one.

Who takes the reports?—There are three sergeants and one inspector and I cannot say who took them.

Why did you not notify the owner; the dog had a license?—It did not have a license number or a collar on when I saw it.

His Worship:—Is it denied that the dog is the defendant's dog?

Mr. Stevenson:—Yes; I am not satisfied. The evidence does not go to show whose was the dog.

His Worship:—Do you still deny that the dog is Mr. Ally's?

Mr. Stevenson:—We say we have lost our dog, but the evidence does not prove that this is our dog. We lost ours on the same date. I should like the inspector called because we made notification to the station and I should like to put a few questions to him.

Sergeant Ogg was called.

Mr. Stevenson:—Are you in charge of No. 2 Police Station?

No.

Can we get the inspector in charge?

His Worship:—He is not here.

THE TIBETAN QUESTION.

CONFERENCE TEMPORARILY SUSPENDED.

Peking, Received June 22. According to Chinese reports, the Tibetan representatives throughout the Conference adopted a strong and unyielding attitude, refusing to accept the terms proposed by the Chinese Government. The meetings were therefore suspended.

It appears, however, that although a temporary suspension has occurred there is no reason to believe that the Conference will fail to arrive at a satisfactory settlement.

The Tibetans throughout made the negotiations difficult by demands which were generally considered unreasonable.

OIL CONCESSIONS.

PLAGUE.

Another European Case in Hongkong.

We have to-day to record a further European plague victim, this time Mr. E.E. Grieve, of the Canadian Pacific Railway being the unfortunate individual. The patient is now in the Government Civil Hospital and he is doing as well as can be expected. In fairness to the company it should be stated that the disease was not contracted in the offices of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The worst of this year's plague outbreak appears to be past. There was, at any rate, a welcome drop in the number of cases and deaths during last week.

Of the 53 cases recorded, 41 proved fatal. Since January 1st there have been 2,010 cases and 1,857 deaths—two European.

During the week there were three cases of enteric fever, and two deaths, one case being British. There was one case of diphtheria and one fatal Chinese case of small-pox.

TRUTHFUL ORATORY.

Mr. Stephen Leacock, the Canadian humorist, writes in Puck thus:—Truthful speech giving the real thoughts of a distinguished guest at the fiftieth anniversary banquet of a society.

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: If there is one thing I abominate more than another it is turning out on a cold night like this to eat a huge dinner of twelve courses and know that I have to make a speech on top of it."

"Gentlemen, I just feel stuffed. That's the plain truth of it. By the time we had finished that fish I could have gone home satisfied. Honestly I could. That's as much as I usually eat. And by the time I had finished the rest of the food and drink I felt simply waterlogged, and I do still."

"More than that: the knowledge that I had to make a speech congratulating this society of yours on its fiftieth anniversary haunted and racked me all through the meal. I am not, in plain truth, the ready and brilliant speaker you take me for. That is a pure myth. If you could see the desperate home scene that goes on in my family when I am working up a speech, your minds would be at rest on that point."

"I'll go further and be very frank with you. How this society has lived for fifty years I don't know. If all your dinners are like this, Heaven help you. I've only the vaguest idea of what this society is anyway, and what it does. I tried to get a constitution this afternoon, but I failed."

"I am sure from some of the faces that I recognise around this table that there must be good business reasons of some sort for belonging to this society."

"Of course I quite understand that the President and the officials seated here beside me come merely for the self-importance of it. That, gentlemen, is about their size. I realised that from their talk during the banquet."

"I don't want to speak bitterly, but the truth is they are small men and it flatters them to sit here with two or three blue ribbons pinned on their coats."

"But as for me, I'm done with it. It will be fifty years, please Heaven, before this event comes round again. I hope that I shall be safely under the ground."

NAVAL CONTRACT SCANDALS.

Public Trial Opens at Tokyo.

The Nagasaki Press of the 13th June reports:—On Thursday, at 9.30 a.m., in the Tokyo Chihō Saiban-cho the public trial was opened of three foreigners and three Japanese charged with the naval contract scandal.

The defendants and the accusations made against them are as follows:

Mr. V. Herrmann, Managing Director in Japan of Messrs. Siemens-Schuckert;—bribery and destruction of evidence;

Mr. George Blandell, merchant, of Yokohama;—purchase of stolen documents and blackmail;

Mr. A. M. Pooley, journalist;—purchase of stolen documents and blackmail;

Messrs. Gondo and Ueda;—receiving money illegally obtained; and Mr. Kaga;—acting as agent for disposal of bribes.

Twelve barristers appeared for the defence and two interpreters were in attendance.

The Court room was packed with spectators, including sixty Japanese and foreign journalists. Members of the staff of the British and German Embassies were present to watch the proceedings and occupied seats behind the judge.

The usual preliminary questions—name, age, address, nationality, occupation, etc.—were asked by the presiding Judge and a Prosecutor then read the finding of the preliminary Examination Court. In conclusion the Prosecutor requested the Presiding Judge to conduct the trial with the most prudence, as not only was a case of great importance by the accused persons were of respectable standing in society and the trial would therefore have far-reaching effects.

Mr. Herrmann was first examined, and in reply to a question stated that Messrs. Siemens-Schuckert in Japan, Messrs. Siemens-Schuckert in Germany, and Messrs. Siemens Brothers in England were separate firms. Business Japan was opened in about the twenty-fifth year of Meiji (12) the late Mr. Yamada was engaged by the defendant firm 17 or 18 years ago, but was dismissed some time afterwards. Six years ago he was re-engaged and placed in charge of new orders; one per cent. commission being allowed him for new expenses and five per cent. personal commission on order.

Mr. Herrmann denied knowledge of any transaction in Mr. Kessler's documents. (Mr. Kessler was his predecessor as Managing Director of the firm).

In connection with the contract for establishment of a wireless station at Funahashi, Chiba-ken, Mr. Herrmann stated that the late Mr. Yoshida was to receive commission at the rates mentioned, but he did not know if a fee of Yen 11,500 was given to him as was alleged.

The Presiding Judge asked the defendant if he thought that Rear-Admiral Iwasaki, retired, would be of great assistance in his business transactions with the navy, although on the retired list, and if that was why Mr. Herrmann had the Admiral Yen 600 in then be safely under the ground.

Mr. Herrmann refused to give a reply stating that it could not be expected that he should reveal his thoughts.

Mr. Herrmann stated that the gift of Yen 600 to Rear-Admiral Iwasaki was not commission on a searchlight bought by the Navy from the firm, but was intended to make the officer understand that by undertaking agency work for the firm he would earn commission, also for the firm to ascertain if the Rear-Admiral was willing to become its agent.

The Court adjourned.

THE LAST OF THE KNOCKERS-UP.

'Knocking-up as a profession is a purely Lancashire industry. You won't find it in London. For one thing the London workman isn't so keen on early rising; for another, he relies on the cheap alarm clock.' So said an expert in London occupations, but I replied, says a writer in the Manchester Guardian, that there is nothing that does not exist in the world of London if you look sufficiently long.

At last a large policeman, observing life outside New Cross Station, in that strange region beyond the verge of Peckham, put me on the scent. He knew an old man in a lodging-house who knocked the workman up each morning for sixpence a week. The old man was run to earth, but not in a lodging-house. He lives in a neat yellow street of stereotyped houses, and in his parlour window I found this framed notice:—

Workmen Called Early in the Morning.

Terms Very Moderate. Windows Tapped so as not to Waken Families.

He turned out to be an old-age pensioner, and when interviewed described himself as almost the last knocker-up in London. The cheap American clock is killing the industry (the expert was right there), but it is still alive and rapping. 'London knocking-up,' he said, 'isn't what it was. At one time I had 60 on my books; now I've only 20, and I've bought up the businesses of three others.'

Knocking-up, it seems, is in London a strictly localised trade, and is not to be found outside New Cross, Deptford, Greenwich, and thereabouts. The workers at the riverside works have always favoured the knocker-up as against the clock. One of his customers boasts that he can sleep through ten minutes of the fiercest alarm clock on the market, but he leaps out of bed as if electrified at the first tap on the window. The knocker-up keeps on tapping until he hears the window go up and the answering call; the clock does what it can, and is silent.

Sixpence a week is the regulation charge, or fourpence in very poor households, and there is constant bickering when pay-day comes, for if a workman has gone back to bed again one morning he wants a penny taken off. 'I expect I shall be the last of the knockers-up. What can you do when alarm clocks loud enough to summon a fire-engine can be bought for half-a-crown? I've knocked-up for thirty years, and never broken a pane or rapped the wrong house, except once, and then they let me get 'em up for a month for nothing before they told me.'

Herrmann refused to give a reply stating that it could not be expected that he should reveal his thoughts.

Mr. Herrmann stated that the gift of Yen 600 to Rear-Admiral Iwasaki was not commission on a searchlight bought by the Navy from the firm, but was intended to make the officer understand that by undertaking agency work for the firm he would earn commission, also for the firm to ascertain if the Rear-Admiral was willing to become its agent.

The Court adjourned.

Sills Delivered.

The cargo of raw silk shipped on board the S.S. Cordillera which left here on May 19 was delivered at Lyons on June 19.

A Lonely Wireless Operator.

The Allan liner Victorian brought to Liverpool on May 23, a Marconi operator who, in response to a "wireless" call for help, had been taken off the Island of Anticosti, dangerously ill from a gun-shot wound.

Captain Cook reported that on May 13, when he was about 120 miles south-west of Anticosti, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, a call was received from the Marconi station on Heath Point that one of the operators had been shot and needed immediate assistance, there being no doctor within a very long range.

The liner was headed for Heath Point, but the weather was so bad and the rocks so dangerous that a landing could not be made until next morning, when the operator, William Peak, was brought off in a boat.

The left side of his face had been practically blown away through the accidental discharge of a companion's gun within a yard of his head while they were out duck-shooting. He was unconscious and very exhausted owing to shock and loss of blood.

He was treated on board the Victorian by Dr. G. Moffat Thompson, the ship's surgeon, and is now thought to be out of danger.

Anticosti is a barren island, 135 miles long by 40 miles broad, inhabited only by lighthouse-keepers and the staff of the Marconi station.

The Atlantic Shipping Conference.

An authoritative German version of the results of the Atlantic Shipping Conference at Cologne is communicated to the Cologne Gazette. It is stated first that the Hamburg-America Line and the Norddeutscher Lloyd have perfected their working agreement for the whole of the North American and Far Eastern services upon a basis of common calculation of gains and losses, and secondly that all the lines which were represented at Cologne have agreed that the shipping agreements previously existing between the Continental and English lines, which expired formally on January 1st, shall be prolonged until the resumption of negotiations in London on August 5th, upon the old conditions—with the exception that there shall be no further compensatory payments to companies which do not contribute their share, but rather as equal a distribution as possible of traffic, secured by the regulation of rates alone.

It has proved impossible to arrive at a settlement with the English companies which have a service to Canada. In order to give the broadest possible base to the new "pool" agreement it was necessary to include the Canadian services, and for this purpose it was necessary to settle the shares of the separate companies. The Canadian companies claimed that their shares in the new "pool" should be based upon the earnings of the last five years in the Canadian trade, but as "record" traffics were secured during the last five years, whereas there had recently been a quite unexpected slackening off amounting to as much as 50 per cent., the other lines regarded the proposal as unfair.

Mr. Ballin proposed "as a compromise" that the Canadian companies should agree to the deduction of 5 per cent. from the average of the past five years, and that a five years' agreement should then be concluded, with the condition that the Canadian lines might renounce it if the Canadian business showed an improvement of 20 per cent., whereas the other lines might renounce it if there was a falling off of 20 per cent.

The Canadian Line regarded this proposal as worth consideration, but the representative of the Canadian lines would not consider it, and demanded at any rate time for further consideration.

As regards the Canadian position in Hungary, it is stated that no settlement was possible, and that the other "pool" lines could not agree unreservedly to the arrangements between the Canadian Line and the Hungarian Government.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

CORDIAL AMERICAN GREETINGS.

[Reuter's Service To "The Telegraph."]

London, Received June 23.
Reuter's Washington correspondent states that President Wilson, cabling to King George his birthday congratulations, expresses "the goodwill of the Government and people of the United States to your great country."

THE BUDGET CHANGE.

POINTED PRESS COMMENT.

London, Received June 23.
The Conservative papers describe the Budget changes as a surrender by Mr. Lloyd George to the rich Radicals. They declare that the members of the Coalition are angry at the damage done to the Government's prestige in the country, and predict a General Election in August.

The Liberal papers assert that the change of procedure is due to the Speaker's ruling. They admit that the local authorities will be disappointed, but emphasize that their relief is merely postponed.

There is a movement on the Liberal side to secure the abolition of the sugar duty or a reduction in the tea duty instead of dropping a penny on the Income Tax.

Mr. Hayes Fisher has given notice of a Unionist amendment regarding that provision is not made for grants to the local authorities in the current year.

KIEL WEEK.

ENTERTAINING BRITISH FLEET.

London, Received June 23.
The British Fleet has arrived at Kronstadt. Great preparations are being made to entertain the Fleet during Kiel Week. The festivities include luncheons, garden parties, balls and the Regatta dinner by the Kaiser on board the Hohenzollern.

ANOTHER BY-ELECTION.

London, Received June 23.
A by-election has been caused at Brighton as a result of the resignation of the Hon. J. E. Gordon, the Unionist member, who was an opponent at the last election.

CARBINES IN FLAX.

London, Received June 23.
A steamer from Chant with a cargo of flax was searched at Belfast, and Martini Enfield carbines were found concealed in the bales.

Dismissed.

The charge of carrying excess passengers brought against a Chinese at the Marine Court, yesterday, defended by Mr. Crew, of Messrs. Hastings and Hastings, the hearing of which had not concluded when we went to press, was dismissed.

Boatmen Fined.

Commander Beckwith, R.N., at the Marine Court, this morning, fined two Chinese $10 and $3 respectively for mooring boats in the prohibited area.

OP IUM AND AMMUNITION

Authorities' Request for Remand Refused.

Two Chinese were charged on remand before Mr. J. R. Wood this afternoon with being in possession of six rifles, 60 rounds of ammunition, 130 lbs. of prepared opium and 11 lbs. of raw opium.

Det. Sergt. Pincott, in charge of the case, informed his Worship that he had been instructed to apply for a further remand. Quite a quantity of opium was coming into the Colony and the authorities wanted to ascertain who were behind the defendants.

Mr. Wood refused the application, stating that if the police had wanted a remand they should have given him notice.

Mr. O. F. Mason, of Messrs. D'Almada and Mason, appeared for one of the defendants, a fireman on board the s.s. Atreus, who pleaded not guilty.

A Chinese detective gave evidence as to finding the rifles, ammunition and opium on board a sampan near the Blue Funnel steamer. The first defendant was absent when the goods were found.

Det. Sergt. Pincott said he was shown the contraband on the sampan, which he ordered to return to the s.s. Atreus. There the second defendant's servant girl spoke to the first defendant having hired the sampan. It was in one of the sacks that a six-chambered revolver was found.

The sampan girl, in the witness box, said the goods belonged to the first defendant.

Mr. Mason, for the first defendant, denied all knowledge of the opium or arms, and said they had nothing to do with his client.

Mr. Mason's client was discharged and the other was sent to prison for six months.

MORE OPIUM ON THE ZAFIRO.

While searching the steamer Zafiro for more opium last Tuesday morning, the customs secret service agents discovered one can hidden in a small locker in the wheel house. The can of opium was evidently put there by Manuel Gonzales, the Filipino quartermaster, who as stated in yesterday's Telegraph, was arrested on the previous day for having opium in his possession. Despite a thorough subsequent search the secret service agents were unable to discover more than the one tin.

A BUSY BACTERIUM.

Due acknowledgment was made recently to a bacterium which is going to revolutionise agriculture. The tribute was paid by Professor Bottomley in a lecture delivered at the Botanical Gardens, says the Daily Citizen. The bacterium in question is only a little chap, for from 10,000,000 to 50,000,000 of them can be packed away in 1.28 of an ounce of soil. But his business is to take the nitrogen of the air and convert it into a valuable fertilizer. So earnestly does he attend to business that in a month an acre of ground can receive the equivalent of a ton and a half of manure by his exertions. The name of this useful but tiny entity is the Azotobacter, and his existence was only discovered as recently as 1914.

THE BECKER RETRIAL.

Judge's Charge to the Jury.

In the Telegraph of June 19 an article appeared in connection with the trial of Charles Becker (since found guilty) for the murder of Herman Rosenthal. The following is an abstract of the charge delivered to the jury by Justice Esabury upon the opening of the trial on May 22:—

The Court read the section of the law making a man guilty of murder if he aided, abetted, or counselled others to commit the crime, though he himself were not present at the moment.

"Under the law the defendant is a criminal if he aided and abetted the murder," said Justice Esabury. "If Rose, Vallon, and Webber acted in a common design to bring about the death of Herman Rosenthal, and if the evidence establishes that this defendant conspired with Rose, Vallon, and Webber, then the defendant is responsible for all the acts of these three."

Justice Esabury then read a decision of Chief Justice Atwell regarding circumstantial evidence. From this the jurors learned that a single circumstantial fact was valueless, but with more circumstantial facts the chain of evidence became stronger. The jury also heard that every fact in the chain of circumstantial evidence must be proved before it is admissible to be considered.

He continued: "Throughout this trial certain witnesses have been described as accomplices. An accomplice is one who is concerned in the commission of the crime, and in this connection I charge you to treat Rose, Webber, and Vallon as such accomplices. In this testimony, if true, Rose, Webber, and Vallon are proven accomplices in this horrible murder of Herman Rosenthal."

In weighing the testimony of Rose, Webber, and Vallon, the jury will remember that these men, while admitted accomplices, were granted immunity. The co-operation of these men in the trial of this defendant was secured by the District Attorney with the consent of the Court; and they were granted immunity for such testimony, provided that they were not guilty of firing the shot or shots.

Justice Esabury said that the affidavit of Rose was admitted, because it tended to establish a link in the chain of facts or circumstances. He charged that the affidavit itself was of no value in court, and he instructed that the contents of the affidavit be disregarded. He also charged that the statement of the driver of the automobile, in which the "gunmen" drove to the scene of the murder, was admitted in order that the jury might form its own inference. He read from the testimony, in which the chauffeur said he heard one of the "gunmen" say: "Leave him turn the car around. Becker has the cops fixed, and everything will be all right." Justice Esabury charged the jurors that they were to be judges of the fact, and not he. Before beginning his review of the testimony, he charged that the jury should disregard his construction of the fact, if their remembrance of the testimony were different from his.

He next took up the part played in the raid, and subsequent events by Rose. From that he went to the incident in which Jack Zeling was entwined and enmeshed with the gamblers. Then he took up the contention of the people as to the hiring of the "gunmen," the Harlem conference, the plot to kill Rosenthal at the Garden Restaurant, and the other incidents leading up to the killing.

WANGMOON BAR.

STRONG NEED OF BUOYS TO MARK CHANNEL.

Levy on Boats Suggested.

Skippers making the West River run have long complained of the need for Wangmoon Bar being lighted with two or three buoys to show the channel. So far as can be ascertained, soundings are never taken to see whether or not the course of the channel has shifted by silting up in one place or by deepening in another.

In the course of a year there is a big steamer traffic over the bar, and on dark, rainy nights it is no easy matter for mariners to keep the proper course. A few buoys, illuminated by gas or otherwise, would meet the difficulty, and it has been suggested that a few cents or even a dollar a year levied on each ship would meet the cost of the buoys and their upkeep. This or some other method could surely be arranged.

The judge continued to describe the testimony offered in the trial, going over the route of the gray "murder car" from Webber's poker rooms to the Hotel Metropole. He gave an outline of the testimony offered by Rose as to the movements of Becker after the murder; how he, Rose, had telephoned to Becker and had complimented him on the success of the crime. Then came a review of the testimony of Webber, to the payment of $1,000 to Rose by him for the pay of the four "gunmen." The Justice then began a review of the testimony offered by the defence, bringing to the attention of the jury the contention of the defence that the death of Rosenthal was the result of a gambler's feud.

He reviewed the testimony of the several witnesses for the defence who endeavored to show that such was the case. Sullivan, Beecher, and Fishman. He said: "The defence has offered the testimony of several newspaper reporters who interviewed Webber on his return from Cuba, at which time he is alleged to have said that the death of Herman Rosenthal was not the original intention of the conspirators, but that they simply wished to scare him. They (the defence) claim that the raid made on Rosenthal's house on April 17 in that year was a bona-fide one, and in support of this theory, have placed on the stand several members of the former squad of which Becker had charge. They offered the testimony of these same officers to disprove the testimony of Mrs. Rosenthal to the effect that she had a conversation with Becker the night of that raid in reference to the cancellation of a $1,500 chattel mortgage."

Justice Esabury said the jury might ask itself: "What were the relations of this defendant, with Rose, Vallon, and Webber? What was the relation, if any, between this defendant and Rosenthal? What motive did this defendant have for desiring the death of Rosenthal? What did he do at the time of the murder and for a short time thereafter? These are questions you may well ask yourself in considering this case."

Dwelling on the motive for the crime, he said:

"We now come to the most important part of the People's defence. Did this defendant, Charles Becker, direct the killing of Herman Rosenthal? That point in connection with the alleged Harlem conference is a most important one. Was the Harlem conference held?

"Whether it was or not, is entirely for you to determine. You recollect the testimony of three accomplices when they stated at the time that Rosenthal must be murdered and that he would protect them. The testimony of the negro, Marshall, is important. Did he see Rose and this defendant in conversation on the night of the raid?"

The Justice recalled the telephone slips, and then asked what they showed.

"Do they tend to corroborate Rose or not? That is a question for you gentlemen to determine. If you find that the conversation over the telephone did take place, you may ask yourselves the question, 'Why did Rose, confessedly one of the murderers, who had knowledge that Rosenthal had been killed, communicate with this defendant at that time?' That is a question for you, gentlemen of the jury, to consider."

"But I do not say that you must disregard a witness because you find he has testified falsely. You may take into consideration all the circumstances in your effort to ascertain the truth. It is your duty to reconcile conflicting statements. There are just two main questions which you are to determine, whether the defendant is a victim of a gigantic conspiracy concocted by Rose, Webber, and Vallon, or whether he is guilty of instigating the murder."

He said that if the jurors were satisfied that there was a conspiracy against the defendant, the verdict should be "not guilty."

"If you find that the charges against this defendant have been proven beyond a reasonable doubt, it would be a mockery of law and on justice not to convict him," said the Justice. "Your oath of duty is clear and distinct, that you will determine the guilt or innocence of this defendant on the evidence, and on the evidence alone. To indulge in anything against him or on his behalf would be a violation of that oath. Neither prejudice nor sympathy has any place in the jury-box. With the question of punishment you are not concerned in the least. The Legislature has seen fit to fix that, and neither you nor myself should consider the consequences of the punishment for an instant."

"There is no more exacting duty than to serve on the jury in a capital case such as this. But it is a duty that must be discharged with patience and fidelity to the oath which you have taken. The District Attorney has been diligent in presenting the case, and now the result of this issue rests with you twelve men, and with you alone. You must determine this defendant's guilt or innocence. What I am most anxious for is that you shall determine it upon the evidence alone. 'You are bound by the law, and must be guided by the evidence. You must not be influenced by remarks of counsel or by prejudice. I trust you will arrive at a conclusion in the case. Unless

"Unknown in the Annals of the Magistracy."

This morning at the Police Court, before Mr. C. D. Melbourne, Florencio Maria de Cruz was summoned by Li Shing, employed at 7, Robinson Road, for alleged assault.

Mr. R. C. Faithfull appeared for the prosecution and Mr. Leo D'Almada e Castro defended.

The case for the complainant was that he was a coolie in the employ of Mr. Helms, and in the course of his duties he took two or three dogs out for a walk on June 15. They were all muzzled and on the lead. Two Portuguese were having a scuffle and the dogs barked, whereupon the men remarked that they would like to kick the dogs. The next night when he went out with the dogs the same two men pounced upon him and knocked him down, kicking him on the body and in the eye.

In the box this morning the complainant said he had been told to issue two summonses but only one defendant had put in an appearance.

On the hearing being resumed this afternoon, His Worship said that the second summons could not be found and he asked Mr. Faithfull if he would take out another summons.

Mr. Faithfull said that when his client instructed him he said two summonses concerning two Portuguese gentlemen were issued. He asked for the case to be adjourned.

His Worship said he would not adjourn the case.

Mr. Faithfull said that the complainant was employed by a gentleman named Helms, who had three dogs. The complainant was out with the three dogs on the evening of the 16th. As he was walking the dogs out, the defendant and another Portuguese committed an unprovoked assault on the complainant. There was a nasty mark on the complainant's left eye and that had been committed by some one.

Mr. D. Almada:—Yes but not the defendant.

Mr. Faithfull:—The Court will try the case.

Complainant said the defendant kicked him on the eye. After the occurrence he went to the Central Police Station and made a report. He had applied for a summons against the other Portuguese who had also assaulted him. He had left the name of two Portuguese with the clerk in the Magistracy for a summons.

By His Worship:—When he applied for the summonses he only wrote his name once.

His Worship said that he would call the clerk for identification as such a thing was unknown in the annals of the Magistracy.

The clerk was called and said there was only one name on the paper (produced) that was handed in.

His Worship remarked that Mr. Faithfull had made a very serious attack on the staff of the Magistracy.

Mr. Faithfull said he was not bringing any attack against the Magistracy; he was merely repeating what the boy had told him.

His Worship said he was very glad to hear it.

The defendant, in the box, denied committing the assault; he was at a friend's house to dinner when the assault occurred.

His Worship discharged the defendant and refused an application of Mr. D'Almada for compensation for his client.

every part of the court performs its function, the trial cannot properly be conducted. Unless you do your duty, all the labour spent on this case will be lost. Let it not be said that you failed to perform your duty, and let the verdict that you will return be in accordance with the evidence."

NEW LIFE OF KING EDWARD.

Sir Sidney Lee is preparing a Life of King Edward. Papers from the Royal archives and correspondence, to which access has not hitherto been available, have been placed at his disposal, and in the preparation of his work he is receiving assistance from Ministerial and other sources. The aim will be to produce a duly authenticated record of the late King's reign on historical lines, and in fuller detail than it was possible to attempt in the article in the "Dictionary of National Biography" so early after the Sovereign's death.

MAURETANIA NEAR AN ICEBERG.

A giant iceberg was passed at close quarters by the steamship Mauretania, of the Cunard Line, which reached New York on May 22, from Liverpool. On the previous Tuesday evening at 10.15 o'clock, the second officer Mr. W. O. Bittle, on the bridge, got the report from the crow's-nest of ice ahead. With his glasses Mr. Bittle saw a great mass of ice off the starboard bow, about three miles away. He ordered the helm a-port and the vessel began to swing toward the north, rounding the berg's steeper side and avoiding the perilous shelving edge to the south. So large was the berg that, although the Mauretania was steaming fast, she kept the berg in sight for an hour and a half. Many of the passengers were on deck and watched, with fascination, this glittering ice. Had the night been foggy, a different story might have been told. It is thought that the berg was the same one that was seen from the Vaterland and which had been reported to vessels by the ice patrol.

Case Adjourned.

A Chinese, charged with assault and maliciously damaging furniture to the extent of $80, appeared at the Police Court, today, Mr. O. F. Mason appearing for the prosecution and Mr. Leo D'Almada for the defence. The case was adjourned until to-morrow.

BOY BITTEN.

Witness:—Well, I can tell you that the inspector cannot say anything about it.

Making Him Smile.

Mr. Stevenson:—Somebody ought to be able to give information about it, your Worship. (to the witness) I don't see any cause for amusement.

Witness:—You don't, but the rest do. The inspector was making me smile.

Witness explained that, on May 31, he did not receive any report about the missing dog, though he believed that Ally's boy came to the station and reported that his master's dog was missing. They were advised to go to the Dog's Home before making an official report. Witness was off duty when the report was made.

Mr. Stevenson:—Do you now yourself that a report was made on Sunday night?—No. Have you had any interviews with the defendant since May 31?—Yes.

When?—On June 18.

Where?—At his office.

Wanted Compensation. You went there?—Yes, with the boy.

What did you go there for?—The boy wanted compensation and I went to give him a chance of paying compensation.

You went to get compensation from the dog owner?—Not to get it but to see if he would give it.

Mr. Stevenson explained to His Worship, who interposed at this juncture, that the questions were designed to show why the summons had been taken out at such a late date.

Mr. Stevenson:—What was the amount of the compensation?—I don't know. I was there to take the boy.

Do you swear that you don't know?—He had a doctor's bill for $150 but I don't know whether that was the compensation or not; he might have wanted something besides.

You saw the bill; whose bill was it?—Dr. Kwan, or Dr. Lee, or something like that.

The Magistrate:—I am afraid I must stop you; I don't want to stop you getting useful information, on the point, but these questions are not to the point.

The Dog Ran Away.

The defendant in the box said that his dog was a wire-haired fox terrier aged two years which he had had ever since it was a pup. On Sunday evening, May 31, he took the dog out for a walk and arrived safely back at the house with him. Later he went out by himself and on returning was informed by his boy that the dog had run away about seven o'clock. He made a report concerning the dog to the Police Station, where there were two Chinese, at about 9 o'clock. The number of the license was 1122. On Monday he made two further reports to the police and again on Tuesday. They were all received by the two Chinese that he had not seen in the station; he did not see a European officer or the inspector on any of his visits.

Mr. Stevenson:—Do you believe that it was your dog which bit the small boy?—I don't know anything about that.

Was your dog given to biting people?—No.

No Complaints.

Had it ever bitten any person before?—No.

You have never had any complaint?—No.

Mr. Stevenson submitted that the dog had evidently run out after his master had gone, and pointed out that when the defendant knew that the dog was missing he did everything that he reasonably could. He reported to the Police not only on the Sunday but twice on Monday and again on Tuesday. Further, when the officer was committed the matter should have been proceeded with at once.

His Worship remarked that he had no doubt that the dog belonged to the defendant, but added:—If the police had intended to take out a summons against the defendant for allowing his dog to go abroad without a muzzle they should have done so at once. It was irregular to hold a summons pending negotiations of this kind.

The defendant was fined one dollar.

DR. MORRISON.

An Australian Interview.

“Morrison, of the Times” is now official adviser to the Chinese Republic, and an interesting interview with him appears in the Australian magazine, Life.

(Dr. Morrison is an Australian.) I would be difficult for the stranger to find the home of Dr. Morrison in Peking were it not for the fact that the rickshaw coolies know him. Tell any one of the small army of rickshaw boys who besiege the doors of the Grand Hotel des Wagons-Lits to take you to Moh-shen-sen, and, after running for more than a mile, he will drop you finally between two stone lions that guard a doorway in a ten-foot wall. It is not always easy to see Dr. Morrison. A phin-like Chinese attendant, who knows his job, guards the gate. If, however, you have previously made an appointment, you follow the impassive guide through the ten-foot wall.

No matter how hot the day, in one foreigner's house you would be sure to find a scene of activity. It is a building remote from the foreign legations, and set in the midst of the Chinese quarter. Long after the lights of the city have been extinguished, there is often illumination in one wing of this residence. Were you to glance through the chinks in the lattice you would see a plainly furnished room with little ornamentation on its walls—an apartment stripped of everything that is not essentially useful, like the deck of a warship in action. Sitting at a long table spread with documents is a tall, thin, fair-haired man, occasionally writing, occasionally leaning back in his chair and thinking—a man with strong features and a curious ‘far-away’ expression in his eyes. This is Dr. George Ernest Morrison, the Australian whose name through the world is linked with Chinese affairs of State, and whose personality is a force in China to-day.

What are the broad ideals of the Republican party? The idea of the party is to incorporate what is best in the American and in the French Republics, with some of the Constitution of Switzerland and with the freedom provided by so many of the institutions of Great Britain. The Constitution is being drafted by a committee of both Houses, a distinguished American professor, Mr. Frank Goodnow, having been engaged by the Government to assist them in their deliberations. Their ideal is that all the five peoples who form the Chinese race should be equal. These are the Chinese, Manchus, Tibetans, Mongols, and Turkish (Mohammedans of Western China). The five bars in the Chinese flag represent these five peoples.

What are your hopes for China? I believe in the future of China, said Dr. Morrison. It is impossible to journey through the Empire and not have confidence in the future of it. It is a country in which every climatic condition is found. The people are industrious. From the people whose houses are in the mountains of Tibet to those who live in the jungles of Canton; from the Manchus in the north to the southern-most dwellers in China—all are alike industrious and thrifty. China has the greatest mineral resources of all the undeveloped countries in the world, with one coal-field which is estimated to be able to provide sufficient coal supplies for a period of ten years.
